Wiredhands

Wiredhands provides Cloud-based, data-driven solutions and services for the Internet of Things. We help organisations move from a diverse landscape of technologies supporting their operational data, to a single point of interaction for analysis, visualisation and business decisions. We deliver on our promise by simplifying the process of connecting to data sources while allowing organisations to focus on using and creating value from their data and expertise in real-time.

Our cloud platform, Unicorn, removes the technical complexities commonly associated with data connectivity, aggregation and visualisation. It allows you to get on the ground running with tools delivered through simple and effective data-driven interfaces.

We serve organisations from a range of sectors including energy, building, engineering, manufacturing, education and environmental sciences, and have consistently delivered the results required within days of on-boarding.
